Charles Frohman last night again took two plays out of his collection made abroad in the past summer and put them before the New York public. Perhaps there was less experiment in the performance at the Empire Theatre last night than in the effort on Thursday at the Lyceum. One part of the programme was "The Tyranny of Tears," which is one of the classics of the contemporary English stage. It was the first work of its kind to show that what could be accomplished with such economy of means. Possibly when it comes to estimating the place of Charles Wyndham in the British theatre the thrust which prompted him to keep his dramatists working with the smallest possible number of characters will be put to his favor. But none of his successors has ever accomplished so much within the limitations of his formulas as Haddon Chambers did in this play.

Work Still Fresh To-day.
In spite of its slender thread of interest there is scarcely a minute of tedium in the work. The playwright has spun a fine thread of interest, but he made it as firm as a church. To build so well on a cornerstone as fragile as that which formed the motive of "Les Femmes qui Pleurent," which Mrs. Burton Harrison says ago turned into an interesting farce as "Weeping Wives," was a test of the playwright's skill. Mr. Chambers' success is shown by the freshness which his work possesses today when so many of its contemporaries in the theatre are forgotten. "The Tyranny of Tears," however, ranks with "The Lure" and "The Tenth Muse" as one of the recent milestones in the English theatre.

The comedy was well acted by Mr. Drew, who resumed his old part; Julian Eltinge, Mary Boland and Laura Hope Crews. The latter was rather an appalling figure as the father-in-law.

A Tragedy of Worldliness.
"The Will," which brought this generously good entertainment to a close, is a bitter tragedy of worldliness. In accordance with his present formula its act is divided into three brief episodes. It is a feeling of revulsion to the older generation is shown through the triumph of the new, as Arnold Bennett's "The Great Expectations" indicated the change in the longer play. There is not even the optimistic note which this suggestion of youth brought to the audience.

There is a beam of the torch in "The Will." The light sputters and goes out in the hands of its first holder. Only darkness remains to close out the view of a life sacrificed to the "accursed thing," which is the flock of every nature, moral and physical, that may ruin life, material and spiritual, unless it be detected and cut away before it is too late.

It is not too late when an embarrassed young couple visit a solicitor that he may make a will to dispose of their few hundred pounds. The wife, although the husband admits that he is getting along in the world by leaps and bounds. He wants all that he may possess to go to her.

Wealth Brings Unhappiness.
In the second scene the portrait of Edward VII. has taken the place of Queen Victoria, and the intervening years have brought wealth to the pair. The wife, fearing that her husband intends to leave her only a life interest in his now great fortune, has had the portrait of Queen Victoria taken down and replaced by a portrait of her own. She is hard and worldly, he pompous and vulgar. But their son got sick with an ear over his first cigarette, and the daughter is betrothed to a man with a title.

The first collector is a senile doddler in his son's office, where the portrait of George V. marks the latest time of the scene. The wife still another will to be drawn. His wife is dead, his son a rotter, and his daughter bolted with her chauffeur when the hero comes for the last time. In vain he seeks for somebody to whom he may leave the money that has brought him only unhappiness. He even suggests the six rivals he has crushed in his struggle for wealth, the suggestion of the "accursed thing" from the numbing old lawyer who sits dozing and rambling before the fire that reminds him of what may happen to him in his own life.

Little Applause for Perfect Acting.
The audience was not liberal in its applause at the revelation of this modern parable. Its flavor was too bitter to evoke any expression of pleasure. But the performance was perfect. When the acting of the little play was perfect, John Drew's ability as a delineator of character was never more delightfully exhibited. As the haughty but confident young husband the vulgar man of growing wealth and the embittered father his naturalness and sincerity proved how high he may progress in his art when the opportunity is at hand. Frank Gunning gave a graphic portrait of old age and Mary Boland gained by the chance of appearing as something besides her comely self.

Columbia Has Record Enrollment.
Columbia University has surpassed all previous registration marks, according to the figures of enrollment. The net total registration for the academic year is 5,518, an increase of 5,746 a year ago. With the summer session included, the total number of students in university courses is now over 10,000, and by the time the final figures are ready it is believed that this mark will be pushed up by another thousand.

Miss Janvyn to Wed Dr. Adams.
Mrs. Joseph Edward Janvyn of 515 Park avenue has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Marguerite Janvyn, to Dr. Walter Wood Adams, who is a practicing physician in this city.

Atlantic City, Sept. 29.—The temperature at noon here to-day was 71.

SENATOR LODGE VERY ILL

Has Undergone Serious Operation at His Nahant Home.

LYNN, Sept. 29.—Senator Henry Cabot Lodge is ill at his home in Nahant. A statement issued to-night by his physicians says he is practically out of danger, after having been operated on last Friday, and that he will recover unless complications set in. It is probable, however, that it will be several weeks before he is able to return to Washington, and months before he again takes up active work there.

The Senator returned to his home a week ago, and at once Dr. Frederick Winslow, the family physician, was called. Dr. Winslow called Dr. Francis B. Harrington of Ipswich in consultation, and on Wednesday they decided to operate for a small portion of the stomach.

Dr. Harrington said to-night that the operation was entirely successful and that Mr. Lodge stood it remarkably well. The family issued this statement to-night.

"Senator Lodge was operated on last Friday for a gastric ulcer. The Senator has been suffering for some days from attacks of indigestion and his condition was so critical that his physicians found an immediate operation necessary. Dr. Harrington and Dr. Winslow, in charge of the case, to-night pronounced the Senator's condition as entirely satisfactory."

GOOD ROADS CONGRESS OPENS.

Secretary of Agriculture Speaks on Government's Policy.

DESOTO, Sept. 29.—More than 4,500 experts in the building of roads assembled in the Wayne Gardens this morning to open the third annual Good Roads Congress, which is expected to mark an era in American road building.

David F. Houston, Secretary of Agriculture, was to-day's chief speaker. He said that the policy of the department would be to aid the construction of interstate roads, but he did not favor Federal aid in the construction of transcontinental highways, hinting that the possibilities of draft were too great in the financing of the long routes. He said the attitude of Congress shown by its recent legislation indicated that Federal aid would go to the construction of post roads which are essential in economic production by farmers.

Secretary Houston admitted that his department proposed to tackle the problem of the high cost of living, as indicated by despatches from Washington yesterday, and that preliminary surveys are already in progress.

DR. ANGELL CRITICALLY ILL.

Pneumonia Complicates the Attack of Heart Disease.

ANN ARBOR, Sept. 29.—Pneumonia which developed this morning has complicated the condition of Dr. James B. Angell, president emeritus of the University of Michigan, who was stricken with heart disease at his home last evening. A crisis is looked for within a few hours.

His condition is unchanged this evening. Although he experiences difficulty in breathing he has little pain. Only one lung is affected. Dr. Angell is conscious and aware of the gravity of his condition.

MR. AND MRS. WALDO AT A VIRGINIA LUNCHEON

Besides Chicken Waffles and Corn Bread They Enjoy Plantation Melodies.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Sept. 29.—The Police Commissioner of New York City and Mrs. Rhinolander Waldo were members of a luncheon party of forty that motored down to Elmhurst Farm this afternoon for an old-fashioned Virginia luncheon of fried chicken, hot waffles, hush puppy corn bread and other Southern dishes. Later they started for New York.

Among others in the party who enjoyed a programme of old plantation melodies during the luncheon were Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Whigham, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Chapin, Mr. and Mrs. George Miner, Louis Wiley, Frederick Sterner, Miss Maude Sterner, Frank Presbury and Charles Presbury.

Some of those who had parties at tea in the fountain room of the new Greenbrier Hotel and later appeared in the gallery at the swimming pool were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Price Wetherill, Mrs. Albert Ordway, Miss Valerie Fiedler, Dr. and Mrs. Guy Fairfax Whitling, the Misses Whiting, Mrs. W. H. Newbold, Mrs. Edmund H. McCullough, Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Twining and Leonard Jacob.

Mrs. Seth Barton French will arrive here from Barton Lodge with a large party on Wednesday, when several private car parties are expected from New York.

Frederick W. Hanesinkel, of Richmond, who knows every trail in this section of the Alleghenies, took a trail party out yesterday over the Greenbrier Mountain. In the party were the Misses Carrie Voigt and Margaret McPherson, who are among the most accomplished riders here. The Misses Whiting have their own mounts and ride every day over one of the fifty or more trails hereabout.

SOME OCTOBER WEDDINGS.

Miss Potter and Miss Fowler Among the Brides of the Month.

Plans have been made for several fall weddings. That of Miss Marie Blanche Potter, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Clarkson Potter, to Dr. Eugene J. Cronin of Richmond, Ill., Queens, will take place on Saturday in St. Raymond's Church at Rye, N. Y. The ceremony will be performed by Mr. McKenna, rector of the church, and will be followed by a small reception at the home of the bride's parents, Cleverly, on the Westchester Country Club grounds. On account of mourning in the bride's family none but relatives and a few intimate friends will witness the ceremony. Miss Potter will have as her attendants her four sisters, Mrs. Charles H. Jackson, Mrs. W. Gordon Conant and the Misses Julia and Lilly Potter. Frank Cronin, brother of the bridegroom, will be best man.

Another country wedding of next month will be that of Miss Eloise Talcott, daughter by a former marriage of Mrs. Edward Wyckoff Harris, to Horace Dorsey Newson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Newson of Llewellyn Park, N. J. It will be celebrated quietly on October 25 at the country place of Mr. and Mrs. Harris in Hyde, N. Y. Miss Talcott will have as her bridesmaids Miss Henrietta Talcott, her only attendant, Gerard A. Jackson, son will be best man. After the ceremony there will be a small reception.

The wedding of Miss Elizabeth B. G. Fowler, daughter of Surgeon Robert Ludlow Fowler and Mrs. Fowler, to Dawson Coleman Glover will take place on November 1 at the home of her parents, 29 West Tenth street.

Miss Adeline Marx, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marx of 53 West Eighty-eighth street, will be married to Maurice de Broek on November 12 at Sherry's. The ceremony will be followed by a reception.

WILLS AND APPRAISALS.

GEORGE HOLMES, who died in Plymouth, Mass., on January 21, 1911, left an estate of $298,359, of which only $71,715 was in New York. He gave his property in equal shares to his wife, Helen A. Holmes, his daughter, Helen, and his son, Frank C.

ANNE L. LOOMAN, who died on December 23 last, left $17,899 to her mother, Burdett A. Decker, left small bequests to the Church of the Immaculate Conception and the Church of the Holy Trinity, and gave the rest of the estate to three daughters.

HAROLD HENRICKS, a retired business man and one of the founders of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, who died May 8, 1912, left $243,888. He gave $10,000 each to his daughter, Helen, and his daughter, Blanche Hendricks, got $185,312. The bulk of the estate was in stock of the New York Central, the Chicago and Northwestern, the Morris and Essex, the Illinois Central, the New Haven and the Union Pacific railroads.

FREDERICK W. SALZMANN—Jenna Salzmann, 14 years old, of 446 West 12th street, who died on March 13 last, inherited one-ninth of her father's estate, which included the property at 223 Fourth avenue. A deed was filed recently showing that this property was transferred to her three half-brothers in 1908. She brought suit yesterday to set the transfer aside.

KATE ROGERS KLEON, who died at Narragansett Pier on August 6 last, left her entire estate to her husband, Frank Rogers Kleon of Fifth avenue and Fifth street.

GEORGE TAYLOR, who died on September 20 last at Huntington, L. I., left his estate to his wife, Antoinette B. Taylor of 125 West 125th street, and his children, George, Jr., Antoinette and John Taylor.

EDWARD LEISNER, who died on August 20 at 1844 Lexington avenue, left $600 to the Mayor of Orléans, France, and the Mayor of Bad-Elms, Germany, for the poor of those places. He also gave $500 each to the Association for the Relief of Indigent Germans and to Immanuel Evangelical Lutheran Church. The bulk of the estate was left to a son, Edward, Jr., two daughters and to grandchildren. A son, George E. Leisner of Seattle, Wash., got only $1,000 and the income from one-twenty-first of the estate.

JAMES S. HARRIS, who died in Brooklyn on February 18 last, left a net estate of $830,997, of which $684,127 was in personal property and the rest in realty. Mrs. Ella L. Harrington, a daughter, receives $250,000, and his children, George, Jr., Antoinette and John Taylor, $197,973. Mrs. Marguerite D. Walters, a granddaughter, $75,210, and two other sons and grandchildren $44,144 each. There are a number of other bequests ranging from $250 to $2,000. The Industrial Association of Brooklyn and the Eastern District Hospital and Dispensary get $500 each.

ROBERT PRATT—Supreme Court Justice Kelly in Brooklyn denied yesterday a motion made on behalf of Gen. John W. Purry, U. S. A., retired, to have his suit for the disposal of the large fortune of his brother, Robert Purry, bequeathed to John Morrissey Gray, tried before a jury. The suit has been admitted to probate, but Gen. Purry is fighting to have his provisions set aside on the ground that there was a long-standing agreement between him and his brother that he should inherit all his property. Justice Kelly holds that the common sense of the court should govern. The suit was tried yesterday.

ISAAC V. BROKAW DIES.

For Fifty Years Head of the Brokaw Clothing House.

Isaac V. Brokaw, president and director of the clothing house of Brokaw Bros., died on Sunday night at his country home at Elberon, N. J. He caught pneumonia ten days ago and pneumonia followed.

Mr. Brokaw, who was in his seventy-ninth year, had been actively engaged in his business up to the time of his illness. The firm of Brokaw Bros. started about fifty years ago and became one of the best known retail clothing houses in the country. He was born in Matamoras, Pa. His father, Simon Brokaw, was a lineal descendant of Bourgon Brouhard, a Huguenot, who came to this country from France in 1675. The name Brouhard was changed to its present form, Mr. Brokaw's mother was the well known Quaker family of Vails of Philadelphia.

Mr. Brokaw came to New York when he was 15 years old and entered the employ of Wilson & Co., dealers in woollens. Mr. Hunt helped him to start in the clothing business in 1845. The first firm was Dunning & Brokaw. Five years later the firm became Brokaw Bros.

The interest of Mr. Brokaw in religious and philanthropic work was large. He was one time treasurer of the Fourth Avenue Presbyterian Church, but of late years his interest was with the Madison Avenue Reformed Church. He founded the Bethany Mission, which contributed largely to this and other similar organizations. He built and gave to Princeton University the Brokaw Memorial in memory of his son. He did much charitable work of which only his closest friends knew. He was a Republican from the founding of the party and was prominent in its affairs, but never consented to be a candidate for or to accept appointment to office.

Mr. Brokaw married Miss Elvira Gould, who with three sons, Irving, Howard C. and George T. Brokaw, and a daughter, Miss Elvira Brokaw Fisher, survives him. He was a member of the Republican and the Union League clubs and the Huguenot Society.

H. W. HARTMAN.

Manufacturer, Friend of Andrew Carnegie, Dies in Denver.

DENVER, Sept. 29.—H. W. Hartman, 63 years old, a wealthy manufacturer, intimate friend and close business associate of Andrew Carnegie, president of the Denver and South Platte Railway Company and prominent capitalist of Pennsylvania and Denver, died here last night of heart disease caused by overwork.

Mr. Hartman was born in Martinsburg, Pa. Early in life he was associated with Andrew Carnegie and together they are said to have organized one of the first steel companies in the United States. He was credited with being the inventor of wire nails and it is said he was the first manufacturer of woven wire.

Mr. Hartman is survived by his wife and two sons in Elwood City, Pa., and a brother, Congressman Hartman of Alabama. The burial will be in Hollywood, near Altoona.
